

THE NED

DOHA

How It All Began

The Ned originated in the former Midland Bank headquarters in London, designed by Sir Edwin 'Ned' Lutyens in 1924.

The opening of The Ned London in 2017 was ambitious, with the transformation taking five years. Today, the property has 250 bedrooms, 10 restaurants, 17 bars and grooming services.

There's also the members-only Ned's Club, which gives access to a rooftop pool, gym, spa, hammam and late-night lounge bar created in the original vault of the bank.

The Ned Doha

Originally designed by acclaimed Lebanese architect William Sednaoui in the 1960s, the building now features members' spaces, 90 bedrooms and suites, and seven restaurants and lounges, along with a health club, spa, gym, and private event spaces.

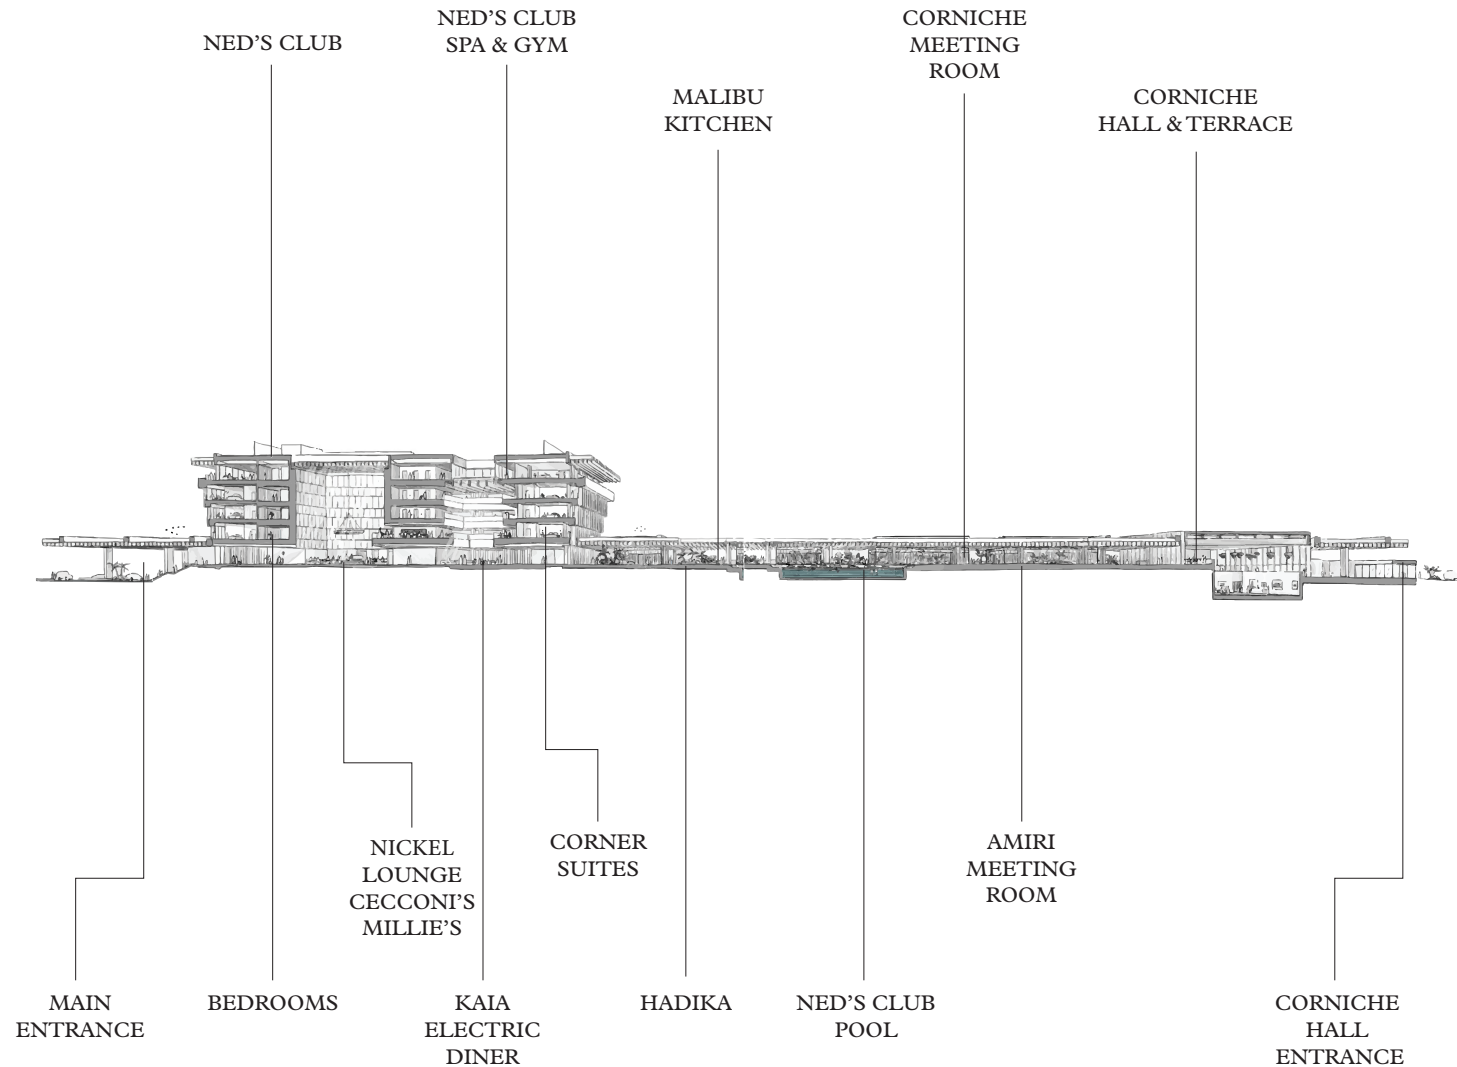

In partnership with renowned architect David Chipperfield, the building was remodelled with the goal of retaining the structure of the old Ministry of Interior building.

The Ned Doha Floor By Floor

The Ned Doha is set over five floors with interiors by Soho House Design. The team used The Ned London as their inspiration to create a ground-floor atrium with a live performance stage at its heart, surrounded by restaurants and lounges.

Outside, a lush oasis-in-the-city garden has been made, with water features, space for contemporary sculptures and a concrete pergola to provide sun-dappled shade.
